Heart Attack

Herman Lorenz, Mokena mail messenger, was stricken with a heart attack last Friday and was found lying on the garage floor near his home, by his wife.

Following medical aid, he gradually recovered. Mr. Lorenz has been carrying the mail to and from the post office to the depot.

Exhibition Game

Next Sunday, June 2, the softball fans of Mokena will be given a real treat when the fast Pullman Fleas will hook-up with the Mokena Robins in an afternoon game at Robinson's Field, starting at 4:30.

It's been rumored one of the reasons the Pullman Fleas are such head-liners is that no matter how many runs they are behind, they always keep scratching.

The Robins are all set for a tough game, so come out and help them swat the Fleas.

The regular league games are played on Tuesday and Friday nights with the starting time at 7 p. m.

A Prayer For Peace

ALMIGHTY GOD, Who art the father of all men upon the earth, most heartily we pray that Thou wilt deliver Thy children from the cruelties of war and lead all the nations into the way of peace. Teach us to put away all bitterness and misunderstanding, both in Church and in State; that we, with all the brethren of the Son of Man, may draw together as one comity of peoples and dwell evermore in the fellowship of that Prince of Peace, who liveth and reigneth with Thee in the unity of the Holy Spirit, now and ever. Amen.

Secret Service Men Reveal Tricks Of Counterfeiters

Mr. Watts, and an assistant of the United States Secret Service, presented an educational as well as a deeply interesting lecture on the subject, "Know Your Money" at the Mokena public school auditorium last Friday evening, before an audience of over 100 interested citizens.

The entire lecture dealt with counterfeit money, how to detect spurious bills, etc. In a brief resume of the history of the Secret Service, Mr. Watts said it was first organized in 1864 by President Lincoln to check on espionage, and in 1865, Congress passed a law assigning the Service to the Treasury Department.

Moving pictures showed how to detect bad bills by means of checking the letters and numbers, seals, etc., with a genuine bill. It was also shown that the counterfeit portrait on paper money will be either too black or too light, and will lack the delicate detail of the genuine.

It was further shown that genuine bills are printed on distinctive paper containing very small red and blue silk threads but that the clever counterfeiters will take genuine one dollar bills and with chemicals, remove all traces of ink and then with counterfeit plates, print bills on the genuine paper in larger denominations. But in spite of this, the counterfeiters cannot engrave the plates as perfect by hand as these plates are made by a special engraving machine in the department of engraving and printing in Washington, D. C.

Mr. Watts stated that New York City seems to be the favorite spot for counterfeiters, as they pass about $50,000 of counterfeit money a month in the eastern metropolis. Through the year, about one and a quarter million dollars in counterfeit money is passed in the United States in spite of all the efforts to stamp out counterfeiting.

Paper money is counterfeited the most, $10 bills being the favorite, while $2 bills are taboos by these clever workers. Counterfeit silver money can be detected by the following methods: feel of coin, which in most cases of counterfeit, coins have a greasy feel. Compare corrugated outer edge of coin. Ridges on genuine coins are distinct and evenly spaced, while on bonus coins, they are poorly spaced and irregular. Cut edge of suspected coins, as most bogus coins are made of soft metal. Test suspected coins with acid. Scrape the surface and apply drop of acid. If bad, coin will turn black.

The lecture was sponsored by the Mokena Civic Association.

Farewell Sermon

Rev. Alvin Lindgren, pastor of the Mokena Methodist church preached his farewell sermon Sunday morning.

Rev. Mr. Lindgren has been attending Garrett Biblical Institute at Evanston and was recently awarded a $500 scholarship for outstanding scholastic achievement. He intends to enter Duke University in North Carolina after spending the summer on his farm in Kansas.

We Are Americans

In these days while the countries of Europe are savagely murdering people by the hundreds of thousands in their campaign of rapine and barbarism; while these blood thirsty mobs are destroying the fine arts and culture of civilization; laying waste noble cities, cathedrals, historical buildings and humble homes; we here in America have no conception of the fury of old world hatreds, the failure of the teachings of the churches for centuries, to establish peace, and of the traitors that have wrought havoc from within.

When we sing, "My Country, 'tis of thee, Sweet land of Liberty", we do not stop to think the great meaning these simple words convey. Truly, this is a sweet land of liberty, in fact the only nation where liberty as we know it, still lives.

This being the month of Memorial Day, when we recall the heroism and suffering our fore fathers endured to make this a land of the free, we must realize more than ever before, that we are AMERICANS, and that we MUST, at any cost, keep that priceless heritage bequeathed to us.

We do not have to fear attacks from Europe, but we do have to watch and be prepared to subdue the foes from within. America seems to be honey-combed with traitors who are anxious to do away with our democratic form of government and substitute foreign isms. We, as Americans, have been too easy with these borers from within. Our colleges and universities have radical professors and students who hate the United States and favor tyranny as practised in Europe.

We have people living on farms, in cities and villages, who have made their living in this country for years, who have amassed wealth, and yet they favor foreign potentates and dictators. We say, it is time that our government should take action against all such copper heads.

Their wealth and property should be confiscated by the government, and these borers should be deported to the countries that they prefer in place of our United States. Down with every traitor. If anyone says to you, that some kind of foreign ism is better than our form of democracy, tell him to lose no time to get out of this country, as we have no room for him.

When these radicals are in a tight spot, they immediately yell that their rights are being infringed upon and that this is a free country.

Yes it is a Free Country—for Justice, Freedom of Religion, of Speech, Press and Assembly—but this does NOT mean that this Freedom should be abused and that certain groups can denounce and try to undermine the very things that make for the freedom they want to avail themselves of.

A decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in: "Milwaukee Publishing Co., Vs. Burleson, 225 U. S. 407" said of "Freedom of Speech": "Freedom of the press may protect criticism and agitation for modification or repeal of laws, but it DOES NOT extend to protection of him who counsels and encourages the violation of the law AS IT EXISTS. The constitution was adopted to preserve our government, not to serve as a protecting screen for those who, while claiming its privileges, seek to destroy it."

Remember, those who are not for our government, are against it, and as such bear watching. Any American-born citizen who does not uphold the United States 100 percent, is not worthy the name, and should be looked upon as a traitor. The so-called "fifth column" must be routed and must be dealt with harshly. Our labor unions need house-cleaning as the "fifth column" finds a fertile breeding place in the ranks of many of our rank unions.

In spite of our crooked politicians, rotten labor leaders and rotten racketeers, the United States is still heaven compared to the hell of Europe. Ever keep one thought in mind, "We Are Americans" and must keep our liberty at any cost.

Also bear in mind, we are about the only Christian nation left in which people can worship according to the dictates of their conscience. We must keep our national life pure and live up to the principles espoused by our fore-fathers, whose faith in the teachings of the lowly Nazarene made this a Christian country, and this faith caused us to inscribe on our coins, "In God We Trust." By living-up to this motto and keeping our national house clean, and in order we can sing with a real meaning, the closing lines of our great hymn: "Long may our land be bright, With Freedom's Holy Light, Protect us by Thy might, Great God Our King."

Frankfort Honors Soldiers Memories

Frankfort turned out almost in full force at the annual observance of Memorial Day at the Frankfort school gym.

At two o'clock, the parade started from the school grounds and proceeded to the Pleasant Hill cemetery where the soldier's graves were decorated with flowers and flags. Following this, the parade returned to the school gym where a program was presented with Rev. Rudolph Malek of the Frankfort Methodist church as the speaker. He stressed the fact that the sentiment of the American people is to keep out of war.

New Lenox Holds Memorial Program

The annual Memorial Day program held in the New Lenox public school Thursday morning was exceptionally well attended. James Gurley served as chairman and Edw. Marshall of Marley as marshal of the day.

Rev. G. S. Gerhold, pastor of St. Peter's Evangelical church at Frankfort was the speaker. Musical selections were played by the New Lenox band and community singing was enjoyed. Mrs. Anton Backer rendered several vocal numbers. The pledge to the flag was lead by Mrs. Stephen Sargent.

At the close of the exercises, a parade formed and marched to the Maplewood cemetery where the children formed in line and decorated the soldier's graves with flowers. Rev. Albert Olson of Grace Episcopal church was the speaker at the cemetery.

S. W. Sub. League Opens Sunday

Next Sunday will ring in the opener of what promises to be the greatest and most successful season of the Southwest Suburban League. This year will see 8 teams entered who according to comparative strength will be the most evenly matched in the league history. This year will also see the addition of Chicago Heights and Beverly Hills to the league, and from all indications are going to give the supposed strong teams plenty of trouble. Oak Lawn Boosters who have always put a strong team on the field, will have practically a semi-pro team, as will Evergreen Park. Orland Park will present their strongest lineup in years, with the addition of a star third baseman and also possess one of the best, if not the best battery in the league.

Worth and Palos from all reports will present their strongest lineup in years. Each team having recruited new players to fill in their weak spots.

All-in-all it looks like the greatest race in the history of the league.

Mokena Has Double Memorial Celebration

One of the most colorful and impressive Memorial exercises ever held in Mokena, took place yesterday morning in the school auditorium, under the sponsorship of the Mokena Civic Association, with the president, Robt. A. Bechstein as chairman.

The Wm. Martin Post, No. 725 VFW of Mokena also participated in the exercises as well as our own school band, which played in a fine manner. And everyone was glad to see the girl and boy scouts, in their uniforms, take an active part. The stage was made colorful with the flag of our country and also the VFW Post flag.

Royal Glahn of Orland Park, who won the prize as the outstanding soloist in the Chicagoland Music Festival last year, sang, "God Bless America", accompanied by Miss Betty Habenicht of Orland Park also. The large audience was visibly thrilled with Mr. Glahn's fine voice and excellent rendition of this patriotic song.

Wm. Cootz of Stone City Post VFW of Joliet read Gen. Logan's famous Order No. 11, establishing Memorial Day. Rev. W. J. Geffert, pastor of the Immanuel Lutheran church of Mokena gave the invocation and benediction. The pledge to the flag was lead by Scouts Marion Stark and David Rabinov and the band played several fine numbers.

Rev. R. L. Sommers of St. John Lutheran church of Beverly Hills gave the address which was outstanding. He went back to the days of Lincoln showing how Memorial Day was first observed. He lead up to the present second world war and made it very clear that the last world war which was supposed to have ended all wars and to have made the world safe for democracy, was a huge failure. A few of the high spots in his speech were:

"Our lesson from the memory of the thousands dead in the last world war should bring with it the defense of America, and when we speak of defense, let us not give room to half-baked theories. Some misguided people had the idea that the present war is being fought over the defense of our country on foreign soil, and that America's first line of defense is the British navy. Another such theory, that our coast line is in danger of Nazi hordes is stupendous folly. Let the experts, military, speak on that. Admiral Leahy, former chief of naval operations, told Congress 'there is no possibility ever of any hostile attack on either of our shores.' Gen. Smedly Butler said, 'there are not enough ships in all the world to bring to the shores of the United States, men and supplies to seriously menace the United States.'"

Rev. Mr. Sommers also said, "Those who follow the agitators and spiritual idealists failed to learn the lesson from the experience of the first world war. This is not a holy war and the issues cannot be simplified as easily as some of our mongers think, who simplify them. We couldn't know the whole truth underneath this war and are in no position to commit ourselves nor the millions of our manhood by whatever sympathies and spiritualist ideas we think are at stake." The speaker made it very definite, that the best policy for the United States is to remain out of all European entanglements and to safeguard our own nation.

At the close of the service, the line of march formed in front of the school, with Geo. Dath, marshal, headed by Wm. Martin Post and Ladies Auxiliary, followed by the Mokena band, boy and girl scouts, cubs and brownies, Civic Association members and citizens, and marched to the Pioneer Memorial cemetery. It was gratifying to note what our citizens thought of this day and spirit shown by the large number of citizens who marched, even to one mother who pushed her baby carriage. Many also drove in their cars who were unable to walk.

At the cemetery, a field piece, which was in service during the World war of 1917 and which was secured by the Mokena Civic Association from the United States Arsenal at Rock Island, as a gift from the U. S. Army, was dedicated as a Memorial to the Revolutionary and Civil war veterans buried in this cemetery. The ceremonies were in charge of the Wm. Martin Post No. 725 VFW and Auxiliary lead by Comrade Cootz of Joliet.

At the close of this dedication service, a special Memorial service was held at the Chas. Denny grave, Revolutionary war soldier, by the Post and Auxiliary. Following this the flag, which had been at the mast during the service, was raised, as Don C. Hall Jr., sounded salute to the Colors. He also played taps at the close of the grave service.

Previous to the Memorial services in the school, the boy and girl scouts, accompanied by the leaders, Adolph Steen and Wm. Semmler decorated with flowers and flags the 16 soldiers graves in Mokena's three cemeteries.

Foreign-Owned West Indies Islands Linked to Defense of Panama Canal

By ALVIN DOWNING

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
WASHINGTON. — Will Germany claim Dutch foreign possessions in the West Indies?

This would bring a momentous problem of the war close to the Panama Canal and the interests of the United States.

Britain and France, too, have possessions in the West Indies and in Central America. And many are the voices that are raised to have these possessions transferred to the United States in repayment of the war debts. These voices have been rising louder since the spread of the war to Belgium, Luxembourg, and the Netherlands. Whether anything will come of this proposal none can say. In the past, it never got to first base in congress. Will the next one deal with it more seriously?

Germany's invasion of Denmark and Holland, which nominally retain governments of their own so far, has brought another suggestion in the domain of West Indian affairs. It is a proposal that the United States purchase outright foreign possession in this hemisphere, where possible. This would not be without precedent, since the United States purchased the Virgin islands from Denmark in 1917. But long before that, President Jefferson made the Louisiana purchase from France. Some 50 years after that came the purchase of Alaska from the Russian government.

Precedent for Idea.

The Netherlands, it is pointed out, own Surinam (Dutch Guiana), a colony of 54,291 square miles on the northern coast of South America and also Curacao, two groups of islands in the same vicinity.

For example, the Virgin islands, in this same area, were purchased from Denmark for $25,000,000.

In its process of growing, the United States has acquired territory in several different ways—by annexation, purchase, conquest, and by arbitration. Exchange for war debts or direct purchase, then, say the STRATEGIC WEST INDIES—This map indicates the strategic location of many foreign owned islands and possessions in their relationship to America's defense of the all-important Panama Canal. Identification of the various mother countries is shown by the abbreviated names below each possession. (Br.) indicates Great Britain; (Fr.) France; and (Neth.) The Netherlands.

there is the vast Dominion of Canada and Newfoundland.

France's debt is about $4,000,000,000. In the western world she owns Guadeloupe, Martinique, St. Pierre and Miquelon. On the continent of South America, next door to Dutch Guiana, France has the 34,740-square-mile territory of French Guiana.

Both of these nations, France and Great Britain, have given up territory in the Western Hemisphere before. History of this very group of islands, the West Indies, supplies proof of this. Cuba has been owned by Spain, by Great Britain, by Spain again and finally, by Cubans themselves. All this in addition to the short military rule imposed on the island for a time by the United States.

Puerto Rico, owned by the United States, formerly was owned by Spain. Haiti has been owned by both French and British interests. Jamaica was once owned by Spain, and the British held it for a long period of time. Thus the history of these islands indicates that their ownership has never been definitely stable.

Imperialistic Intentions?

Of course, any plan to acquire any of these islands for the United States would be attacked on the grounds that we were branching out with imperialistic intention. Advocates of the suggestion defend their position in this regard by pointing out that we are preparing to hand the Philippines back to the natives. And, they continue, acquisition of territory in the region described is part of a measure of self-defense, for it is highly essential that the United States keep the Panama canal. Holding these islands would make the job of defending it a very much easier undertaking for the United States army and navy.

But why, the question logically follows, why is it so vitally important that our defense of the Panama canal influence our actions to the extent that we even suggest acquiring new naval bases to aid in its defense? Briefly, the answer is this: Ever since the United States has become a world power on the high seas we have been developing what is recognized as a "one-ocean-fleet." That is, the power of the nation's naval force is concentrated into a unit that best performs if all its component parts are put into action together. For this reason, if international conditions warrant it, the navy concentrates in the Pacific to ward off any possible threat to America's shores. Then if official Washington sees trouble brewing for Uncle Sam in the Atlantic regions, the fleet may be directed to proceed through the Panama canal to take up a strategic position in the desired location. Thus the canal should never be kept open so that the fleet can be shifted from ocean to ocean without being forced to make the long and time-wasting trip around the southernmost tip of South America.

Pacific Islands Acquired.

In the Pacific the United States has not hesitated to acquire islands which serve as vital defense links to our far-flung possessions in that section. In 1899 the Samoan islands came under the combined control of the United States, Great Britain and Germany. Just before the turn of the century, the islands were divided among the three nations, the U. S. getting Tutuila and the harbor at Pago Pago. In the meantime, a war with Spain had been fought and the Hawaiian islands had been annexed by the federal government.

In addition, after the close of the war with Spain and with the treaty of Paris, Spain ceded outright the Philippines and Guam in the Pacific and Puerto Rico in the Caribbean. Plus this the United States has annexed the following Pacific islands in the years indicated: Wake (1899); Midway (1899); Samoa, (1899); Howland, Baker, Jarvis, (1856) and exercises joint control with England over Canton and Enderbury. In 1867 we purchased the Aleutian islands and the Pribiloff groups off the coast of Alaska.

Under the Monroe Doctrine, the United States is committed to the policy of allowing no European or other foreign nation acquiring possessions in the American hemisphere by war. Will that apply to the case of Germany in the West Indies should it claim any of the islands, or to other lands in the Americas?

These will be questions that will be asked many times in the coming months.

Formula for Household Budget Is Applied to City Governments

CHICAGO.—Because the housewife who purchases a kitchen spoon faces the same problem as the municipal official who shops for a steam shovel—the problem of a budget, domestic or governmental—a quarter of a million women in 5,000 American cities and towns have begun to apply their experience in household budgeting to measure the efficiency of their municipal government.

Since January, women in 50 of these communities have initiated surveys of their local governments which promise to bring about higher standards of economy and efficiency in municipal operations, according to Mrs. Melville Muckelstone, president of the National Consumers Tax commission, whose campaign for "tax reduction through education" is now active in 45 states.

Working co-operatively through a unique "exchange of ideas" plan, each of these N. C. T. C. groups has asked its mayor to appoint a non-partisan committee of citizens and public officials to survey the city, comparing its methods and expenditures with those of other municipalities of like size.

While none of the surveys has been completed, the non-partisan groups are discovering financial methods which, says Mrs. Muckelstone, "no thrifty housewife would put up with in her own household."

For example: The mayor in a midwest city was discovered to have sold a $50 radio for $500 to a paving contractor just before contracts were let.

Because city officials "neglected" to pay their personal residential electric bills to the municipally owned plant, another community is in a serious financial condition.

All members of the school board of a small southern village as well as the tax collector were found by another survey to be ineligible for the positions they hold.

The survey reports, according to Mrs. Muckelstone, will show where the taxpayer's dollar goes. The analysis will point the way to new economies, for the surveys will be exchanged between cities so that one may benefit by the experience of others.

"Our members have no thought of demanding curtailment of essential services nor will reductions in taxes always follow reduction in waste," Mrs. Muckelstone says. "Municipal services will, however, be improved and broadened so that the taxpayer will receive more for his money."

The big primary battle in Maryland was one for control of the organization of the Democratic party in the state . . . Roosevelt has worsted opposition both inside and outside of his party.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—It's kind of hard for the average outsider to get much reaction to the Maryland primary results unless he has some personal friends involved. This, of course, is the case with many Washington observers. Friends of Sen. George L. Radcliffe were pleased. So were the friends of Sen. Millard E. Tydings.

Admirers of "Big Train" Walter Johnson were glad he won the Republican nomination for congress in the Sixth district—Davy Lewis' old stamping ground. So was House Republican Leader Joe Martin, and not just because he takes an interest in baseball. Nomination of Johnson gives the Republicans a real chance to gain one Republican seat in Maryland, for the Sixth district is the nearest thing to a Republican district the state has.

Actually the big battle was one for control of the organization of the Democratic party in the state. On one side were arrayed Senator Tydings and Howard W. Jackson. On the other were Democratic National Committeeman Howard Bruce, who was the candidate against Senator Radcliffe, and Gov. Herbert R. O'Connor.

JACKSON SEEKS COMEBACK

Jackson was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor two years ago. He piled up a big popular vote, but the peculiar county unit system in Maryland did not give him a majority of delegates to the state Democratic convention, so he lost out in convention trading to O'Connor.

Jackson has bided his time, seeking a comeback. It is his ambition to be elected governor two years hence. So when Governor O'Connor broke with Senator Tydings and decided to support Bruce for senator against Radcliffe, Jackson promptly jumped in on the Radcliffe side.

Incidentally Jackson proved his strength in the primary, delivering every one of the six legislative districts in Baltimore city by overwhelming majorities. Governor O'Connor was proved pretty futile by the results, so there will have to be a lot of rehabilitation there if the governor is to get a second term. Incidentally nobody but the late Albert C. Ritchie has been re-elected governor of Maryland since the Civil war. Ritchie served four terms.

But to the average voter, who cared nothing about who is the big shot in the organization, the Democratic primary offered a grab bag draw in a confusion contest.

F. D. R. WORST ENEMIES

Both inside his own party and in political warfare with the Republicans, President Roosevelt has worsted his enemies to an extent no one would have believed possible when congress convened last January.

At that time it appeared that the Republicans, acting with the conservative Democrats, would follow up their victories in the "purgings" of 1938 by thoroughly emasculating some of the more objectionable New Deal legislation. It also appeared probable that the anti-third term Democrats would be able to make quite a showing. Some thought the "allies" would have enough delegates at the Democratic convention to create considerable fear of the consequences should a third term be forced.

Neither of these consummations so devoutly hoped for by the conservative Democrats has materialized. So far as the third term is concerned, it is obvious that all the President has to do is simply wait until he is nominated.

WEAK OPPOSITION

On the legislative front it is little short of amazing how ineffectual the opposition to the President has been. Of course it should be conceded that the President was very adroit about this in that he did not ask for anything new, if one leaves out the proposal for new taxes. Even on this last there was no pressure. Mr. Roosevelt never moved a hand to get congress to do anything about imposing new taxes, once he had mentioned the notion of imposing $460,000,000 additional to cover various changes which had occurred in the budget picture.

In fact, many of his friends and lieutenants on Capitol Hill went so far as to tell their colleagues that the President did not really want the new taxes, at this session, or, to put it more bluntly, before election. Neither did congress, so there was no difficulty about that.

It is also true that the President was not able to throttle the Dies committee.

Handy End Table Made From Spools

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

"DEAR MRS. SPEARS: I have made a pair of spool shelves like those you give directions for in your Sewing Book No. 3. They are painted watermelon pink to match the flowers in my bedroom curtains, and they are very pretty hung at each side of the windows. I would like to make some end tables of spools for the living room, but I can't think of a way to make them rigid. Have you any suggestions as to how this may be done? B. P."

Curtain rods are used through the spools to make the legs. Better take along a spool to try when you shop for the rods; and get the type that has one piece fitting inside the other. If the spools are a little loose on the rod, it won't make any difference for they must be glued between each spool, and also between the spools and the table shelves. I have shown in the sketch everything else you need to know to make this table. Good luck to you!

STYLE 'PIRATES' CONTINUE TO COPY FASHIONS

STATE COLLEGE, PA.—No great relief is in sight for manufacturers who protest against style pirating, according to a new study just completed by Dr. Kenneth D. Hutchinson, assistant professor of economics at the Pennsylvania State college.

As the result of an investigation which he has summed up, Professor Hutchinson believes that no producer of new styles, whether for textiles, clothing, furniture or what-not, should be given a monopoly.

"All styles are imitative," he said. "We select styles in order to look like others whom we think are stylish. Fashions need not be beautiful. In fact, they frequently are ugly. As long as they look like what the style leaders have, we accept them."

CHAPTER XVIII—Continued.

Norwood drew rein beneath the baobab tendril. He didn't even have to stand in the saddle to reach it. The sais rode forward and took the reins. Norwood climbed the tendril, hand over hand, swung himself on to the wall, and walked forward. As he emerged out of the shadow of the overhanging trees, he saw O'Leary looking backward toward him. Norwood extended both arms and moved them slightly up and down. That was an order to O'Leary to patrol the road. Norwood wanted no witnesses. He walked forward along the wall, toward the kiosk, where Rundhia stood talking to Lynn.

Lynn saw him first. She looked startled and Rundhia faced about for a moment speechless.

"You, is it!" he said. "What the devil do you mean, climbing walls at this hour of the night?"

"I came looking for you. No, it isn't my ghost. They missed me. Did you hear the shooting? Aren't you rather a duffer at choosing marksmen?"

"I don't know and I don't care what you mean by that remark," said Rundhia. "Get off the wall."

"When I'm ready. Rundhia, what have you been saying about me?"

"You flatter yourself. I don't care to talk about you."

"What did you say to the Resident? He mentioned that you had called to see him."

"Did he? Well, my conversation with the Resident was confidential."

"So was mine, Rundhia. Say to me what you said to him."

"You may go to the devil," Rundhia glanced backward at Lynn, then sneered at Norwood: "People who pocket bribes are not entitled to—"

It wasn't exactly a haymaker. It was a right-handed wallop without any ringside pedigree, but with all the strength, contempt and anger of a clean-living man behind it, that landed on Rundhia's chin like a gun going off. It brought a laugh from O'Leary, who couldn't possibly have seen it. Rundhia reeled backward toward the garden as if pole-axed, out for the count. He did a forward knife-bend on the edge of the wall, and toppled backward into the darkness. The crash of shrubbery announced that he had fallen soft. Norwood glanced at Lynn then: "Just a minute, please."

He ran down the steps to take a look at Rundhia and dragged him out of the shrubbery to the path. He made a rough estimate that no bones were broken and let him lie there. He returned up the steps and confronted Lynn.

"I suppose you've killed him."

"Oh, no."

They could see each other almost as distinctly as in full daylight. Lynn's hair was a mass of spun gold. Her emotions, revealed on her face, her parted lips, her startled, questioning, proud eyes drove out of Norwood's mind the few terse phrases that he had prepared. He said suddenly, because he couldn't think of anything else to say:

"What are you doing in that make-up?"

"You should have hit me," Lynn answered. "That was a cowardly blow. You gave him no warning. Are you sure you haven't killed him?"

"I'm afraid he'll live. Is it true, Miss Harding, that you told Rundhia about a packet of diamonds that you saw drop from my pocket this morning?"

"Yes."

Norwood stared at her. She didn't flinch. She continued speaking after a moment:

"That is why I wrote inviting you to come and see me. I wanted to tell you what I had done, and to explain how I came to do it, and to apologize."

"I didn't believe you had said it," Norwood answered. "I came to—"

Lynn interrupted: "I did say it. It was my fault. I wish you had hit me, instead of Rundhia. I would have preferred that to the humiliation of being despised and of being—"

Rundhia moaned on the path in the darkness below.

"Captain Norwood, I must go and help Rundhia. Will you please let me pass?"

"No," said Norwood. "I will shout for servants presently, to carry him to bed."

"His nose may be bleeding!"

"Serve him right. I came to tell you—"

"I can't bear to be told. I know. You're too late, Captain Norwood. I have heard that what I said has got you into serious trouble. I am ashamed of it, if that is what you want to know. If you had read my—"

Norwood interrupted her. "What do you mean by too late?"

"If you had answered my letter—"

Lynn's lips were trembling. She was choking. "Rundhia—"

She couldn't continue. She felt like crying. Suddenly she controlled herself and looked straight in his eyes:

"Captain Norwood. If you please. I must go and look after Rundhia. Will you let me get by?"

Norwood didn't move: "What did you say in your letter?" he asked. "If you despised me too much to read it, why ask that now? I know you got the letter. It was sent by one of the Maharanees' messengers, who came back and said he had given it to you. He said you tore it up; he saw you do it."

"Did the messenger tell you that?"

"He told Rundhia."

"Oh," said Norwood.

O'Leary whistled, in the distance, somewhere between the kiosk and the palace front gate. Rundhia groaned again. By the noise, he appeared to be helping himself to his feet by holding on to the shrubbery. Norwood called to him:

"Are you all right, Rundhia?"

"None of your business!" said Rundhia's voice from the darkness.

"I'm going to have you arrested."

Rundhia's footsteps went staggering away in the direction of the palace.

Norwood faced Lynn again: "Sorry. I'm in a hurry. Would you like me to see you as far as the palace steps?"

"Oh, no. Thank you."

"Well, look here: I wrote you a letter, just in case I didn't find you."

Lynn interrupted: "I did say it."

I brought it with me. Will you take it now and read it later? It's quite important. Perhaps you'll give me an answer next time we meet."

"If we do meet," Lynn answered.

"Why should we? Good-by."

"So long. Don't forget my letter, will you? I didn't expect to find you alone, so I wrote what I thought you wouldn't care to have me say in other people's presence. I said exactly what I think."

Lynn paused on her way to the head of the steps. O'Leary whistled again, twice this time.

"So long," Norwood repeated.

"See you as soon as I can."

Lynn spoke abruptly: "One moment, Captain Norwood. You say you have said what you think of me in this letter? I said what I thought of myself and of you, in my letter to you. You tore mine up."

She tore up Norwood's letter. She scattered its fragments into the darkness.

"Good-by!"

"Careful down those steps," said Norwood. "See you later."

"Why?" Lynn answered.

Norwood swung himself down from the wall, by the baobab tendril. He swung himself on to his horse and was off at a gallop. O'Leary had whistled three times. That meant "urgent."

CHAPTER XIX

The horses and their riders were invisible in the shadow where the high wall curved away from the moonlight. O'Leary spoke hoarsely:

"That must ha' been a snorter! You could ha' heard that punch half-way to Delhi. Who did you hit?"

"Mind your own business. Why did you whistle?"

"Stoddart sent a man from camp to overtake you. He gave the message to me. He said there'd come a sweeper, running like hell, from Mrs. Harding in the guesthouse. She says she has to see you in a hurry, it's important, and won't you come quick?"

"What's become of the sweeper?"

"He lit out. He said all's quiet at the palace."

"Nothing else new?"

"No."

Norwood thought a second: "You go to the Residency. Ask to see the Resident in person. Give your message to nobody else. Here—" here's my card. Send that in. Ask the Resident to stand by the phone and expect a call from me at any minute."

"Do I know anything, if he asks?"

"No. Look here, O'Leary: I know what I'm going to do, but I don't know what will happen. You follow the Resident to the palace. Slip in through the gate after him and watch for that Bengali doctor. Hold him, if you catch him coming out or going in. When you see me coming out of the palace, if I hold up my right hand, let him go. If I hold up both hands, turn him over to the gate guard. You've no police power, remember. So be careful."

Norwood was off at full gallop, with the sais hard after him, before O'Leary could answer. He drew rein at the palace gate and was delayed there for a moment or two by an argument between the commander of the gate guard and an Indian contractor, who had turned up with a motor truck for Mrs. Harding's luggage and a car for Mrs. Harding. Because Norwood was in uniform, the contractor appealed to him:

"Sir, I am refused admission. Sir, I have an order from the American lady, Mrs. Harding, to collect her luggage and to convey her to the station. It is a long way and a bad road. She has already paid me. I fear we shall not catch the midnight train unless—"

The commander of the gate guard drew Norwood aside: "It is his honor or the Resident's wish," he said quietly.

"No business of mine," said Norwood. "May I leave my horses inside the gate?"

The great gate clanged behind him. He walked to the guesthouse. Mrs. Harding was no longer recumbent on pillows on the chaise longue. She seemed even to have partially recovered from her lameness. She was seated bolt upright on one of her trunks, on the garden path, in front of the veranda door.

"There's no understanding you English," she remarked. "Why don't you use your title?"

"I haven't one."

"But your brother is an Earl, isn't he? So you're an Honorable, aren't you?"

"That is not what you inferred at our last interview."

"Well, I didn't know who you are. How could I? I have a letter for you, from Lynn. But the envelope was addressed to me. I have thought it over, and I suppose she must have put it into the wrong envelope by mistake, because I have received no answer to my letter to her. Here it is."

Norwood stepped on to the veranda to read it by the light from the window.

"Dear Captain Norwood,

"I am feeling ashamed and so sorry that I hardly know what to write. Won't you please call as soon as you can and let me explain. I mentioned, without thinking, something that occurred this morning. To my horror, I have now learned that what I said has been repeated, and that the result may be—I can't write it! Please, Captain Norwood, please believe that what I said was merely thoughtless; and that what I have heard about you I refuse to believe. I know you are an honorable man. Please help me to undo my very bad mistake. I will be waiting for you at the palace. Won't you call as soon as possible?"

Lynn Harding."

Norwood returned to Mrs. Harding. "How long have you had this?"

"Don't try any of that hoity-toity arrogance on me!" she retorted.

"I'm a Harding, I'll have you understand! I sent a messenger for you because—"

Norwood was gone before she could answer. He dashed into the house, seized the phone and gave the Residency number. Then he lowered his voice:

"That you, sir? Norwood speaking from the guesthouse. Can you come to the palace? . . . Yes, I know you told me to keep away. But I'm a ghost. I'm supposed to be dead . . . You say you'd heard it already? My God, they were quick! . . . No, no, I wasn't hurt. The point is this, sir: they are betting even money in the bazaar that the Maharajah won't outlive the night. I suspect poison . . . What's that? . . . Well, for one thing, I know for a fact that Mrs. Harding has been given poisoned toast to make her vomit . . . Well, sir, obviously to keep her away from the niece . . . Yes, yes, I have that letter. I've just read it . . . If I'm not too late, and I don't think I am, I'm going in to upset someone's apple-cart."

He hung up, thought for a couple of seconds and then returned to Auntie Harding.

"Thanks," he said. "Good night. I'm in a hurry."

"Stop! Come back. Captain Norwood, I didn't send for you to use my telephone! Here are my trunks, and I can't get anyone to wait on me. I can't get away and I can't go back in! I paid a contractor in advance, and he hasn't turned up. Please do something."

"Were you running out on Lynn?" Norwood asked her.

"Captain Norwood, how dare you say that!"

"Were you?"

"No, I was not! I was bluffing."

"Uh-huh. Shall I tell her you were bluffing?"

"Don't you dare! If you know where she is, you bring her here."

Rundhia was punch drunk. All the physical fight had been knocked out of him. He knew his nose was bleeding. He knew Lynn was in Norwood's grasp. That Norwood had escaped death was a staggerer almost worse than the punch on the jaw. For the moment, he could think of nothing but Norwood. Like a man in the ring, who is almost out on his feet, he obeyed the instinct to deliver a foul blow.

He reeled and staggered, gradually recovering, along a short cut toward his own palace. As his nerves and muscles recovered, so did his brain. He began to think a little clearly. By the time he reached his palace and had sent for the Bengali doctor, his nose had ceased bleeding and he needed nothing more than a bath and a change of clothing. There were plenty of servants to lay out clean clothes. He talked to the Bengali doctor in the bathroom, where the shower drowned the sound of their voices. Even so, he spoke English, lest one of the valets should overhear.

"Now listen. Don't answer me, or I'll have you hanged. Damn you, I mean that. I'm desperate. Thanks to your letting me down in a pinch and refusing to have anything to do with it, the attack on Norwood was bungled."

"He is alive? I heard they killed him."

"Do I look as if they'd killed him! He's on the rampage. I'm going to get him."

"Careful!"

"Watch your own step. If you fail to kill your man tonight, up goes your number! Is the old fool mulling over his stamp albums?"

"Yes. His Highness is studying stamps. He has with him that stamp salesman from Lahore, who can speak nothing but Punjabi, but can swindle without speaking at all."

Government Scientists Record Speed of Bird Flight

The swiftest birdflight ever recorded accurately is in the neighborhood of 175 miles an hour. Ordinary, unhurried flight averages from 20 to 40 miles an hour, according to the species.

The United States Department of Agriculture has compiled a complete record of the measured flight speeds of North American and European birds. The swiftest denizen of the skies, according to this compendium, is the California duck hawk whose speed, measured with a stop watch from an airplane, was found to be between 175 and 180 miles an hour. The eagle is relatively slow. The Department of Agriculture compiler, found one rather questionable recorded speed of 120 miles for a golden eagle. Only two entirely trustworthy records of eagle speeds were found—one of 30 and the other of 60 miles.

Bird speed records more than 20 years old are worthless, the report explains, because any possible means of measurement was quite inaccurate and some fantastic estimates were made, ranging up to 5 or 6 miles a minute. Most such guesses, and by far the most trustworthy, were made by hunters. A hunter, aiming at a bird in flight, had to make three subconscious estimates—the distance of his target, the speed at which it was moving in order that he would know how far ahead to aim and the speed of his bullet. The skilled marksman learned to make allowance for these three factors instinctively, but never could explain satisfactorily how he did it. Only one of these elements of marksmanship, the velocity of the bullet, could be measured accurately.

But, says the report, "it has been found recently by experiment that there is an appreciable loss of time in pulling the trigger. Against the sky it is practically impossible to gauge the exact distance of the bird, and the distance it travels may be exaggerated because momentum will carry a shot bird some distance before it falls. An overestimate of a very few feet in these figures will result in the computation of very high speeds for game birds. Gunners have been prone to attribute speeds of 100 or even 150 miles an hour to ducks."

The curve in the road adjoining Oak Park ave., just south of the Rock Island crossing is being repaired with new gravel and dressing by the state highway department while the county is making repairs on the Oak Forest road.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schmutte have sold their home in the south subdivision to the Elmore Real Estate Company.

Work on the construction of the new addition to the local bakery is well under way.

This week has been official clean up week when all rubbish was hauled away and disposed of by rom Darby. The next cleanup week will be in October.

Several new buildings are under construction in the south subdivision.

Woman's Club

The Department of International Relations, of Third District, feels deeply the responsibility it is facing during the ensuing year, according to Mrs. Merle S. McCarney, who is entering upon her second year as chairman of this department of work.

Mrs. McCarney is a member of the Gage Park Woman's Club. Her plans for the coming year include the organization of round table studies of Americanism in every club in Third District and a careful and analytical study of American history, particularly of the foreign policy built up by the various administrations.

"Internationalism must never be thought to supersede nationalism," said Mrs. McCarney, and "we feel that the most important function of this department, in so critical a period of our history, is to deepen our appreciation of our own nation."

Study classes will be organized at the beginning of the club season, in October, and the chairmen of the local clubs will be asked to cooperate in arranging the panel discussions. American history will also be urged as a study throughout the entire state, by the International Relations Departments of every district, according to Mrs. McCarney.

Women's Benefit Association
The Women's Benefit Assoc. held the second meeting of the month on Thursday May 23. In the absence of our Pres. Mrs. Mildred Sayre, the meeting was conducted by Vice Pres. Mrs. Alfreda Willman. Three members were reported sick by the committee. They were: Mrs. Mildred Sayre, Mrs. Ruth Bacon and Mrs. Norris.

We hope we will see them at our next meeting June 13. Blanket winners were: Mrs. Marie Jensen and Ervin Batterman. Everyone enjoyed playing buncie after the meeting.

Mrs. Alfreda Willman, Press Cor. A meeting of the Sunshine 4-H club was held Sunday, May 26 at the home of Mildred Kampe.

The club decided to have a scavenger hunt party next Sunday night for the older girls. Each girl is to ask a boy and the couples are to meet at the home of Pearl and Dorothy Wille at 8 o'clock. The two couples winning the scavenger hunt will receive theatre tickets as a prize. The younger girls will have a theater party in the near future.

Mrs. Kampe, Arthur and George, Hilda Wille and Elvira Stuckey are going to Urbana on June 4 to attend the annual State University 4-H Tour. Elvira and Hilda will dramatize "In An Old Dutch Garden" in the stunt contest.

Luella Hoger and Bernice Kampe gave talks on "The Advantages of Knowing How to Sew." Pearl Wille gave a talk on "Sleeping and Lounging Garments for Different Occasions and Individuals." Dorothy Wille gave an illustrated talk on the "Clothes to Flatter each Individual." Laura Wille gave a talk on "Facts About Canning." Helen Feigel gave a talk on "Canning Peaches."

The next meeting will be held June 20 in the home of Bernilda and Elvira Stuckey. The following girls will give talks or demonstrations: Mildred Kampe, Mildred Steinborn, Bernice Bettenhausen, Bernilda Stuckey, Eleanor and Marion Keuch. Plans for a trip to Riverview will be made at this meeting.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Soul and Body" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, May 26.

The Golden Text was, "My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God" (Psalms 84:2).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "O bless our God, ye people, and make the voice of his praise to be heard: Which holdeth our soul in life, and suffereth not our feet to be moved" (Psalms 66:8, 9).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "As astronomy reverses the human perception of the movement of the solar system, so Christian Science reverses the seeming relation of Soul and body and makes body tributary to Mind. Thus it is with man, who is but the humble servant of the restful Mind, though it seems otherwise to finite sense. But we shall never understand this while we admit that soul is in body or mind in matter, and that man is included in non-intelligence. Soul, or Spirit, is God, unchangeable and eternal; and man coexists with and reflects Soul, God, for man is God's image" (p. 119).

ORLAND PARK

The Edwin S. Mitchell residence at 144th and Woodland ave., is to be rebuilt. Altho the building was damaged somewhat by a recent fire, it was not burned beyond repair as previously reported.

The Orland Fire Department did a good job in saving the place from very extensive damage.

At the meeting of the village board Monday night, bids for the paving of Union street were not accepted and new bids are being asked for and must be in by June 10th. The project mentioned is to be financed by the state motor fuel tax.

The Wabash viaduct matter also was given much consideration. The village favors a concrete structure and the relocation of it so it will line up with the streets in its vicinity. The village will pay a portion of the cost of the construction it is understood.

Wednesday the High School entertained the graduating group with an all day bus trip and picnic at the Morton Arboretum west of Downers Grove.

Members of the Orland Park PTA took a trip through the Olson Rug Company plant in Chicago Tuesday. The state highway department has had a group of men working on a storm water sewer project west of Orland Park on 143rd street the past week.

A number of Orland Park people attended the play "The Trouble Chasers of 1940" presented at the Palos Park Village Hall last Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights.

Edw. Schmaedeke, Orland township tax collector has completed collecting taxes and has turned his tax books into the county treasurer's office.

Ray Brennan who recently purchased 3 acres of land at the corner of 159th street and Keane avenue from Wm. Beagley, is erecting a new filling station at this location.

The case of Roy Cannon came up in the Homewood Police Court last Wednesday and he was assessed a fine of $200 which was suspended with the provision that if he is arrested any time within one year he will be given a jail sentence of 400 days in the county jail. He was also to be given a mental test this week.

Supervisor Fred E. Yunker had quite an interesting case come up for a relief claim recently. A family moved from Monee to Orland township a short while ago. They were not residents of this township for 3 years as required by law. As they had only resided in Monee township for two years they could not get relief from that township to which they had moved from Manhattan, but Manhattan could not give aid either as the family had only been living there for two years. They came to Manhattan from Kankakee county, but as they have not lived there for over four years they could not get aid there. Supervisor Yunker finally gave the family temporary relief until the matter can be ironed out.

The weekly Wednesday night auction sales being held Wednesday nights at the Fred Ingraham place at 159th and Wolf are drawing big crowds. A large variety of articles are on sale every Wednesday night.

NEWS ITEM: AMERICA PROCLAIMS ITS NEUTRALITY.

War Effects On Prices

We are beginning to understand rather clearly, that the fortunes of the European war are going to have some effect on the prices that farmers receive is the opinion expressed by Farm Adviser C. A. Hughes. Lately we have seen the effects of soaring prices of corn and wheat and then the sudden decline of these commodities as the military situation in Europe changed. Whatever the outcome of the European conflict will be the American farmers, the manufacturers and laborers are going to suffer because our export trade will undoubtedly be considerably curtailed.

For a good many years—up until 1900—Europe has been the safety valve for surplus production in the United States. Starting with 1900 our export trade began to fall off. It was increased somewhat during the World War but soon came down to the level of its former decline shortly after the war. Our surplus export at the present time consists largely of munitions. Obviously, this is not a market to which we can turn if we do submit to national re-cannot go on so very long. When peace does come, war debts are going to be so staggering, there will be nothing with which to buy in the United States. Therefore, it appears that demands for our surpluses will be even less than it has been heretofore. The effects of this will be the appearance of a surplus which more quickly will react unfavorably than it has heretofore.

We may expect an attempt on the part of labor and industry to more effectively regiment and maintain a domestic price level satisfactory to themselves. Farmers are going to be obliged to follow some similar procedure or be smothered in their excess crops produced. How this will be done is a problem.

The necessity is plain. It is pigmentation that there will be many unpleasant changes to be made in our ways of living. However, on the other hand, if methods of dealing with these problems can be found that can be operated by producers, laborers, and businessmen themselves, the impact on our ways of living will not be so severe. Finding and determining how this is going to be done undoubtedly constitutes national problems in the next two or three years.

He Got Back 15 Cents

Just before the opening of the special session of Congress in November, 1937, Vice-President Garner arriving in St. Louis from San Antonio, en route to Washington, made a bee-line for a barber shop.

For 25 minutes, the Vice-President relaxed for a shave at the hands of Dexter Davis, Union Station barber who has had Garner in his chair four of the eight times in recent years he has stopped in St. Louis.

As he left the barber shop, he handed the Negro shine boy a quarter.

"Thank you, suh," smiled the boy. "That's a quarter," reminded Garner.

"Yes, suh, I know it's a quarter," replied the boy.

"Well, I want some change, Garner demanded.

He got back 15 cents.

A Pledge Today

Today, for the 73rd time in our history, we pause to salute the honored dead—the thousands on thousands of men and women who gave their lives that this nation might continue to exist in freedom and peace.

It is a solemn day, a day of sadness and remembrance, a day to honor brave deeds and brave men. But, if we are to keep faith with those who died that democracy might live, we must also look to tomorrow.

Our fallen soldiers faced bombs and bullets and all the horrors of the battlefield—but they had visible enemies. We today, as Americans proud of our heritage and united in our ideals, might fight a new kind of war. We are faced with a battle of words and thoughts, as "war of nerves," that is as potent in its threat to our democracy as any armed invasion.

Already, the men who would attack us from within are at work. They are well equipped to do the job of destruction. In meeting halls, in our homes and schools and even in our churches, they batter at the walls of American unity. Steadily and ceaselessly, they labor to plant suspicion and hatred, to set man against man and group against group. Well do they know the power of the spoken and written word, the visible strength of the malicious whisper. Like those abroad whom they parrot and ape, they have but one goal: the destruction of democracy to open the way for totalitarianism.

If we do not want to lose the liberty so dearly won, we must be on the alert for these hidden traitors. Europe is our red light of danger. There the dictators played on differences in religion and background to create discord among the people. There the hate-mongers of Nazism, Fascism and Communism encouraged bigotry, and smiled on violence. Now, in one weakened country after another, democracy falls crushed by the wayside and Might rules in place of Right. In Scandinavia we have seen the most recent betrayal of an unsuspecting people by treachery from within.

We cannot let that happen here. We will not have our unity destroyed by elements that seek to divide us so they alone may rule. The very essence of our national spirit is the fact that here citizens of different origins and varied religious convictions live together as free and equal members of a national brotherhood. In that spirit, we will go forward as one people, determined to preserve "one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

That is our pledge to our comrades who have gone, on this Memorial Day. May we never break that trust!

YOUR HOME MERCHANTS ASK YOU TO "BUY AT HOME"

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

COST: 3 CENTS

SOME of the critics of advertising—and in this world there are those who criticize every good thing—level their lances at what they think is a weak spot: its cost.

They read of the million-dollar advertising appropriations, they brood on the cost of a full page of advertising in a metropolitan newspaper or a national magazine—and then they loose their sharpest barbs against the waste which they say is involved in this costly process.

Their only trouble is that they judge without having all the facts. For the truth is that advertising is the least expensive cost of doing business. Everything else costs a good deal more in proportion than the advertising.

The wise and capable business man bases the amount of money he spends for advertising upon the volume of business he either is doing or expects to do. This money set aside to advertise is called the appropriation.

It seldom runs, take the country over, more than 3 per cent, which means that for every dollar of sales made the advertising cost will be just three pennies. That is all—three pennies.

The large advertising appropriations come when a business, through the help of intelligent advertising, becomes so great that its annual volume runs into many millions of dollars a year. But whether an advertiser spends $10,000 a year or $10,000,000, his percentage remains the same—an average of 3 per cent.

The amount of money spent in advertising well-known products is so small as to be ridiculous, when you really know the facts.

Take oranges. How much do you suppose the growers spend to advertise their product? A third of a cent per dozen is all.

A national cracker baker reveals that he sets aside only one-tenth of a cent to advertise a package of crackers, while the manufacturer of a soft drink spends 1576/100,000 of a cent in advertising a five-cent glass of his product.

The manufacturer of a medium-priced automobile spends less than 3 per cent for advertising—he spends only $12 in making a $1,000 sale.

And even this small amount, this three cents on the dollar, isn't an expense, an added premium on the business. By spending three cents out of every dollar for advertising, the manufacturer or merchant can sell for less and give you more for your money.

CHINCH BUGS

Illinois farmers can expect trouble from chinch bugs this year, according to the quarterly report of the State Natural History Survey. Because last winter's weather, the cold, was without many periods of sudden change, chinch bug mortality was low, probably less than 2 per cent. In certain locations, however, large numbers of bugs were eaten by mice and shrews, the report said.

The Survey has also conducted intensive studies in the control of other harmful insects. A non-poisonous dip composed of fused sulfur and bentonite is proving to be the best control for cattle lice.

SAVE OUR WILD FLOWERS

Admirers of wild flowers are asked by Clayton F. Smith, president of the Cook Co. Board of Forest Preserve Commissioners, to join in a county wide campaign of horn honkers,—for the preservation of wild flowers.

Thoughtless persons sometimes pick the wild flower blossoms to the death of the plant, and to their own disappointment, because before ten minutes have passed, the picked blossoms become wilted stems. Leave wild flowers for others to enjoy—pleads President Smith.

"If motorists, upon seeing anyone picking wild flowers will honk their horns, the flower picker immediately realizes he is doing wrong, and is being noticed by another. He stops picking them. The experiment has been tried by Forest Preserve staff members, and found to work every time!"

Won't you be a horn honker in the county wide campaign to save the wild flowers?

The hawthorne and crabapple blossoms, now in full bloom, present a panorama of beauty throughout the whole district. People are warned not to tear branches from the trees. Rangers are patrolling the area and will make arrests, President Smith warns.

Teachers Are Born,

That Is Conclusion That Murl Estes Has Reached and He Should Know

By O. L. PARKS,
Pres. Parks Air College

It was after 2 1/2 years of his course at Southwestern Missouri Teachers' College in Springfield that he swerved from education as a vocation to aviation as a career. "The teaching profession is honorable and noble," Estes figured, "but the sky is calling and I just can't keep my feet on the ground."

It all started when Estes saw his first squadron of Army airplanes and talked to some of the tail, weathered and trim officers. He was so thrilled with aviation that he couldn't keep his mind on such earth-bound subjects as algebra and zoology when he went back to school.

And so between semesters he made a momentous decision and enrolled in the United States Army Air Corps Training Center in 1933. Then followed flight instruction in rugged primary training planes and then in more advanced ships.

After a year he had the biggest thrill of his life: graduation and the winning of his wings. Then a brief trip to his home town of Logan, Mo., in his handsome new uniform as a second lieutenant in the Army Air Corps.

In two years at Selfridge Field, Michigan, he acquired on active duty with the Air Corps hours in the air that qualified him for a transport pilot's license. And he was off to new horizons; 10 months as co-pilot with TWA; pilot with Pennsylvania Central Airlines in June, 1932 and a long record of excellent service along the skyways.

The years have made a roster of his passengers read like pages from "Who's Who." The ships he flew have carried movie stars, orchestra leaders, statesmen, financiers and famous professional men. His passengers have included specialists speeding on missions of mercy, to perform vital operations in some far-off hospital; honeymoon couples and businessmen to whom time saved is money earned.

In speeding his passengers to important operations, conferences and on other missions, Murl has played a silent role as hero. To his organization that made possible his post in aviation, the United States Army Air Corps Training Center, he is quick with his praise: "It's the world's best school. Mr. Chips had a grand life as a teacher but I wouldn't trade places with him. My job's in the sky."

The Secretary of the Army Air Corps Training Center at Randolph Field, Texas, is glad to explain by mail to young men the program that prepared Estes for the place in aviation he likes so well. The program reads like a wonderful dream but it is as true as Murl has found his epigram to be: "Teachers are born, aviators are made... By the Army."

THE "WISE" MONEY is buying Ford this Year!

And Here's Why:

Wise money likes room, and Ford has the most rear seat knee-room at its price, more inside length than cars far higher in price! Wise money likes performance, and picks the only low-price "8"! But wise money likes economy, too, and Ford gave most miles per gallon of all standard-equipped cars at its price in the famous Gilmore-Yosemite economy test! Wise money likes a fine car ride, and knows that the big, steady, quiet 1940 Ford has the ride of the year! Wise money likes value, so it knows that Ford has the biggest hydraulic brakes, the only semi-centrifugal clutch giving lower pedal pressure at shifting speeds, and the only hardened valve seat inserts for all engine valves among cars at its price. Wise money likes up-to-the-minute "features," and this Ford has them all!... But why not come in and put your own money "wise" to everything this big and brilliant Ford car gives you!

WHEN YOU'RE PLANNING A MENU ESPECIALLY FOR MEN
(See Recipes Below)

Just between us women, we'll have to admit that, if left to his own devices, many a man would enjoy living on a straight diet of meat, potatoes and pie. It requires a little judicious scheming on Mother's part to supply Father with his favorite foods and provide for him a wholesome, well-balanced meal in the bargain.

Whether she's planning a menu to please the men folk in her family, or is chairman of the refreshment committee for the May meeting of the business men's club, it's a wise woman who remembers—and caters to—these masculine foibles in food.

Just how do a man's food preferences differ from those of women?

Well, for one thing; a man wants plainer, more substantial food. He likes a meal to be composed of only a few dishes, but he wants those few to be tasty, full of flavor and cooked to a turn.

And he likes to know just what he's eating—he wants none of the "masked identity dishes" that defy him to find what they're composed of. In a word, fancy cooking is wasted on the average man, but he appreciates good cooking to the limit.

Remember that for most men, meat makes the meal; that hot breads are a masculine weakness that they themselves acknowledge; and that for dessert men have a special fondness for pie, or chocolate cake.

You'll find more suggestions for planning masculine menus in my booklet, "Feeding Father." There are tested recipes, too, for over 125 of father's favorite foods.

Hot Muffins.

- 2 cups general purpose flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 egg
- 1 cup milk or water
- 2 tablespoons shortening, melted

Mix and sift dry ingredients, add unbeaten egg, milk or water and melted shortening. Mix quickly. Pour into well-greased muffin tins, and bake in hot oven (450 degrees) 20 minutes.

Deep South Ham Sandwich With Hot Mushroom Sauce.

- 6 pieces corn bread, about 3 inches square
- 6 slices ham, boiled or baked
- Mushroom Sauce:
- 1 can condensed cream of mushroom soup
- ½ cup milk

Stir the ½ cup of milk into the condensed cream of mushroom soup. Heat, but do not boil. While the sauce is heating, split the pieces of corn bread and toast them. Then place the ham between the toasted slices of corn bread and pour the hot mushroom sauce over the top.

Note: This is an excellent way to utilize left-over corn bread. If hot corn bread is used, we suggest the pieces be split and buttered, but not toasted.

My Best Chocolate Cake.

- 2 ounces bitter chocolate
- ¾ cup butter
- 1½ cups sugar
- 3 eggs
- 2½ cups cake flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 cup milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Melt chocolate carefully over warm water. Cream butter thoroughly and add sugar slowly. Separate eggs, beat egg yolks, and add to butter and sugar mixture. Add the melted chocolate. Mix and sift together the flour, salt, and baking powder and add alternately with the milk and vanilla extract. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into the cake mixture. Place in 2 well-greased, 8-inch layer cake pans. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for approximately 30 to 35 minutes.

Next week in this column Eleanor Howe will give you some clever suggestions for entertaining a June bride. There'll be a menu and tested recipes, too, for a "Kitchen Shower"—and hints on what to give the bride.

Corn Bread.

(Serves 6-8)

- 1½ cups yellow (or white) corn meal (uncooked)
- ½ cup general purpose flour
- 4 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup milk
- 2 eggs (beaten)
- 2 tablespoons fat (melted)

Sift the corn meal with the flour, baking powder and salt. Combine the milk, eggs, and shortening and add to the dry ingredients. Bake in a well-greased 8-inch square baking pan, in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees) for 40 to 50 minutes.

Garden Salad Bowl.

- 1 head lettuce
- 1 cucumber, peeled and sliced
- 1 green pepper, cut in thin rings
- 3 fresh tomatoes, cut in wedge-shaped pieces
- 1 bunch radishes, sliced
- Roquefort cheese dressing

Prepare and chill vegetables thoroughly. Line salad bowl with large crisp leaves of lettuce and shred remaining lettuce rather coarsely.

Place all vegetables in salad bowl and toss together with a well-seasoned dressing. Serve at once.

Welsh Rarebit.

- 1 pound sharp American cheese
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 1 cup cream
- 2 eggs
- 2 teaspoons worcestershire sauce
- ½ teaspoon paprika
- Salt and pepper to taste
- ½ teaspoon dry mustard

Cut cheese in small pieces and place it together with the butter in the top of a double boiler. Melt slowly. Then add cream, eggs (well beaten) and seasonings. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture has thickened. Serve on hot buttered toast.

Noodle and Tuna Fish Casserole.

(Serves 8)

- 1 8-ounce package noodles
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 1½ quarts boiling water
- 1 7-ounce can tuna fish (drained and flaked)
- 1 1-pound can cream of mushroom soup (not condensed)
- 2 tablespoons catsup
- 1 tablespoon prepared mustard
- ½ cup American cheese (grated)

Cook noodles in boiling water to which salt has been added, until tender. Drain and rinse thoroughly. Place one-half of the noodles in buttered casserole, add tuna fish and top with remaining noodles. Combine mushroom soup, catsup and mustard and heat to boiling point. Then pour sauce over noodles in casserole and top with grated cheese. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for approximately 35 minutes. Garnish with wedges of hard-cooked egg.

To Please the Men Folk in Your Family.

From the brand new bride, to grandmother, aren't most of us cooking largely to please Father?

Eleanor Howe's booklet, "Feeding Father," is one every homemaker needs in her file. It's full of tested recipes for the foods that Father likes best—and will give you masculine menu hints, as well.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D.
Dean of The Moody Bible Institute
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for June 2

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

TESTING CONDUCT BY ITS USEFULNESS (A Principle of Temperate Living)

LESSON TEXT—Ezekiel 15:1-6; Matthew 5:13-16; 7:16-20; 1 Corinthians 10:6, 7.
GOLDEN TEXT—Ye shall know them by their fruits.—Matthew 7:16.

Sound principles are foundational to right living. Right living is temperate living. The first temperance lesson for the year emphasized the sacredness of life. This lesson, which is our second one on that subject, properly stresses the importance of testing conduct by its true usefulness.

The emphasis of modern thinking is upon learning, upon the brilliance of scientific achievement, with little or no concern about personal character. Christianity and the Bible go to the root of that matter, stressing the need of stalwart moral and spiritual character, without which other attainments are lacking in real value and meaning. Unless what a man accomplishes is the expression of the greatness of his character, it is transient and often detrimental in its effect on society.

Tested by its results, the liquor traffic stands conclusively and completely condemned. Even its own frantic efforts to clean up and be more presentable indicates that fact. McAlpine made a rather acute comment when he said, "IF I WERE A LIAR..."

I'd advertise beer as a food, whisky as the promoter of the abundant life, and cocktails as the badge of social correctness. They say that if you repeat any thing times enough, people will believe it."

The Scripture portions before us present five inconsistencies, five instances where fact denies a false profession.

I. Wood Without Strength. (Ezek. 15:1-6).

The branch of a vine is at its best too crooked and pliable to be very useful, but here we have a piece of vine which has been charred in the fire until it is so useless that it can only be burned up. This is the picture of a life, possibly somewhat limited in its abilities and gifts, but nevertheless valuable, but made utterly useless by careless or dissolute living. How tragic!

II. Salt Without Savor (Matt. 5:13).

True salt is penetrating, antiseptic and purifying, but savorless salt is good for nothing but to make a road for the feet of men. "Ye are the salt of the earth." Christians, if they have the true savor in their lives, will count, by their very spiritual pungency, against sin and corruption in their communities.

III. Light Without Illumination (Matt. 5:14).

A light is intended to give illumination to all around about it. It always does that thing unless someone hides it under a cover, and then it becomes not only useless, but dangerous. A life lighted by faith in Christ will shine to the very ends of the earth and, as a missionary once said, "The light that shines farthest shines brightest at home." We are the light of the world, but if we cover our light we deny the very essence of our natures. Here is no thought of proud or selfish display. Light does not shout about itself, it just shines—but it really does shine.

IV. Trees Without Fruit (Matt. 7:16-20).

Every plant brings forth fruit after its own nature. We do not expect figs from thistles, but we do expect figs on the fig tree. The countryside bears no more desolate figure than a blasted, fruitless fig tree. Quickly the owner cuts it down and terminates its shame and uselessness by burning it. What about men and women? God has made them in His own image and likeness. He has given them intelligence and personal ability. He has a right to expect the fruit of a useful life from every one, and particularly from the Christian, who is "a good tree."

V. Life Without a Purpose (1 Cor. 10:6, 7).

Light and salt are inanimate objects. Trees and vines with their wood and fruit are alive, but they are without intelligence and morality. Man, however, as we have already suggested, is the moral and intelligent crown of God's creation, made in His own image and likeness. If they who know better, live lives of careless indifference, yea of outright wickedness, how shall they escape the judgment of God in the day when they shall stand before Him to give an account of the manner in which they have used this precious gift of life?

The Beginning of Wisdom

He sent redemption unto his people; he hath commanded his covenant forever; holy and reverent is his name. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom; a good understanding have all they that do his commandments; his praise endureth forever.—Psalm 111: 9, 10.
